

COURT SUMMONS SPECIAL GRAND JURY

PERRY-TP MAN SENT TO JAIL AFTER CHASE

William Brown, Intoxicated, Terrorized Family and Neighbors With Knife

William Brown, 50, a resident of near New Holland, is being held in the county jail after a chase that lasted for a greater part of Friday night and early Saturday morning. A formal charge of illegal possession of intoxicating liquor will be placed against the man by Sheriff Frank Davis.

Brown, with one pint of alleged whiskey in his possession, became intoxicated and came into possession of a large corn-cutter. He proceeded to terrorize his wife and two children to the extent that all three of them made hurried exits from their home.

The man, apparently enraged by this time, went to the home of a neighbor and chased all that family from the house. He is said to have gone from room to room, and everywhere he could find anyone he would drive him into the yard, menacing him with the knife.

Late Friday night, these neighbors, whose names are not known by the authorities, called the sheriff's office and two deputies went in search of him. He fled through fields and made an escape from the men.

Early Saturday, the sheriff's residence was again notified of the man's capers and Sheriff Davis and Deputy Porter went in search of him. He saw them approaching and took to his heels through a field.

Porter pursued him through the field and Davis ran around the field trying to head off the man. Brown went through the field and up over a hill and dropped to the ground. He was smoking a pipe and according to the authorities the smoke gave his whereabouts away.

Planning to have a little fun, Davis went near the spot where the man was lying and yelled at the top of his voice. The man jumped and sped away but before long he was overcome. He resisted but was finally subdued and taken into custody.

Several weeks ago, Brown escaped from Sheriff Minton of Fayette-co after the officer had placed handcuffs on him. Minton placed Brown in an automobile and went away for just a minute, but when he returned Brown had taken to his heels and was far away.

He was later recaptured and paid a fine in Fayette-co courts.

Commemorates Late Elgar
Barrere, Who Passed Away
Last Sunday Evening.

A committee of the local Chamber of Commerce, appointed by T. F. Jeffries, president, and comprised of George M. Fitzpatrick, T. O. Gilliland and Edward Crist, adopted the following resolution to be placed upon the minutes of the Chamber, concerning the untimely death of Elgar Barrere, 66, hardware merchant, who passed away last Sunday evening:

"Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father (and we humbly submit to His goodness and wisdom) to so suddenly and unexpectedly remove from our midst, our friend, neighbor and co-worker, Elgar Barrere, who for more than 40 years stamped his pleasing personality on the business, moral, social and religious life of our people, and who was largely instrumental in giving to our city the solid, conservative, yet progressive business character for which it is known.

"Therefore be it resolved, that the Circleville Chamber of Commerce with which he was so closely associated has faithfully served as Secretary and also, as a member of the Board of Directors for many years, acknowledge the great loss of earnest worker and wise counselor.

PREDICT RAIN IN MID-WEST OVER SUNDAY

Eastern Portion of Drought-
Parched Area To Receive Relief, Report Says.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—A thin blanket of showers over the Eastern half of the drought-stricken area, with scattered rainfall in the middle west, will bring further relief to parched farms and sun-baked countryside over the week-end, it was announced today by the weather bureau.

Governmental agencies meanwhile continued their efforts to provide relief for drought sufferers, particularly in the cattle country, pending launching of co-operative relief measures by the president's drought relief committee and various state organizations. Six states, Virginia, Illinois, Missouri, Kentucky, Indiana and Iowa, have already organized their local committees and are ready to cooperate with the government.

The financial conference, to be held here Tuesday, will release approximately $100,000,000 in credit facilities to aid farmers during the remainder of the current season and in preparing for next year. Credit facilities will be handled through local or state credit corporations and the federal intermediate credit banks.

Pending this relief, the department of commerce was cooperating with local associations in moving beef cattle from parched lands to good pastures and in arranging supplies of feed for cattle in dairy states. The department announced that several thousand carloads of hay were available for shipment in drought areas in the central west. It also reported that hay was reported in New York, Northern Ohio, Northern Indiana and Michigan, with good supplies of alfalfa hay in Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico and Arizona. Prairie Hay, it was said, can also be secured in Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma.

The federal farm board has turned over a $5,000,000 fund to the national livestock association to be used in financing purchases of cattle feed. Local farmers in need of feed have been urged to get in touch with their local livestock associations.

The menace of forest fires, which destroyed millions of dollars of property at the height of the drought has again caused the department of agriculture to issue a special warning, after revealing that new fires were costing the government $19,000 a day to combat in various sections.

"Many sections have reported high hazards, with numerous fires put out and some still raging," the department announced. "Drought, low humidity, lightning and increasing use of the forests by recreationists accounted partly for the $19,271 from emergency appropriations, expended during the first ten days of August. As yet, it does not appear that the rate has diminished.

Cooling showers in much of the drought belt, it was added, has somewhat reduced the menace of fires but the situation was termed "critical" in the extreme west. Special guards have been stationed throughout the national forests but the public was warned to guard against carelessness that might result in raging fires.

A recent edition of the Washington Post carried a picture of Mrs. Langdon with Miss Laura Ingalls, rivals in the race, shaking hands beside their planes. Mrs. Langdon and Miss Ingalls were two of the four entered up to Wednesday but more were expected before the crack of the gun which would speed them toward Chicago and the National Air Races.

The contestants before leaving, were guests of honor at a dinner given at the Willard hotel by the Washington Women's club.

EMPLOYMENT FIGURES FOR U. S. QUOTED

Two Percent of Population
Out of Work and Looking For Jobs.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Two percent of the population of the United States, or 2,508,151 persons out of 122,698,190, were unemployed in April, the bureau of the census, announced today.

This unemployment figure was for class A, described as "persons out of a job, able to work and looking for a job."

"The percentage of unemployment shown is based on the total population rather than on the number of gainfully employed workers, because the total population figures are now available and the gainful worker figures are not," the statement said. "Percentages based on the number of gainful workers will be made public as soon as the necessary information can be tabulated."

The percentage of unemployment given for the different states range from 0.5 percent of the total population in South Dakota and Mississippi, to 3.2 percent in Rhode Island and New Jersey and 3.3 percent in Michigan.

Numerically the unemployed were the greatest where there was the largest population. The number for New York was 364,617, 2.2 percent, and in Illinois 236,926, 2.1 percent. Pennsylvania showed 211,877 unemployed, 3.1 percent; New Jersey 127,615, 3.2 percent; Michigan 160,606, 3.3 percent and Massachusetts 115,987, 2.7 percent.

The lowest number of unemployed was 2,741 in Delaware, 1.1 percent, and 2,850, or 3.1 percent in Nevada.

Out of a total population of 6,639,837, Ohio had 168,277 persons who were looking for jobs, or 2.5 percent. West Virginia's jobsless totaled 21,396, or 1.2 percent of 1,725,510.

SENTENCE MAN TO HOT CHAIR

Romeo, Canton, O., Bank Robber, Found Guilty In Death of Bank Guard

CANTON, O., Aug. 23.—While James Romeo, 29, sat in county jail here today doomed to death in the electric chair for the murder of Charles H. Riblet, 68-year-old bank guard who was shot July 16 in a $60,000 bank messenger robbery, attorneys for the man were making preparations to file a motion for a new trial.

Romeo was found guilty by a jury of six men and six women late yesterday on charges of shooting in perpetrating a robbery. The jury, which deliberated two hours and 40 minutes, made no recommendation for mercy.

The death sentence will be imposed upon the doomed man Monday, according to County Prosecutor James M. Auges. Defense attorneys declared following the jury's decision that they would carry the case to higher courts in an effort to save Romeo from the electric chair.

Romeo admitted under cross examination that he had taken the $60,000 robbery loot to his hotel room. He denied any part in the holdup, however. The doomed man was known to police as a pal of Charles Kish, alias Williams, who was slain during the robbery by Riblet. Kish was believed to have fired the shots that proved fatal to the bank guard.

Romeo is the first man sentenced to death by a jury in this county since 1914 when Dick Howell was sent to the chair for murdering a policeman.

AIMEE McPHERSON MAY ASK PROTECTION FROM MOTORISTS

Adherents Say Many Jokingly Drive Up To Cabin and Ask
Her Condition; Mother Prepares Statement Concerning Kidnapping To Be Released at Her Death.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 23.—Because hundreds of motorists have been pausing in front of Aimee Semple McPherson's Malibu beach cottage, many of whom shout jocular inquiries concerning the state of her health, her adherents today threatened to ask for police protection.

In addition, many of the flock from Angelus Temple have gone to the beach cottage where the noted evangelist, according to her physician, is suffering from a nervous breakdown. None of them have been admitted. The choir from the temple also put in an appearance yesterday, and after giving voice to a few hymns for the benefit of its bed-ridden leader, departed.

Meanwhile the battle of words between the Evangelist and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, has subsided somewhat. The latter, at a Brentwood sanitarium, has also denied herself to all visitors. Her nose is still swathed in bandages. Despite denials of Mrs. McPherson, her mother insists that her nose was broken during a quarrel with her daughter.

What caused the evangelist to take to her bed is still a matter of conjecture, and for dispute. Her mother, who recently submitted to a face-lifting operation, declares that a similar operation was performed on Aimee. It was also reported that the Evangelist, at the time when she is said to have sought the services of facial surgeons, had also expressed the desire to have excess fat removed from her legs. It was asserted this operation was denied and that subsequently she went on a liquid diet, which resulted in the loss of 28 pounds.

Whether Mrs. McPherson will appear on the platform of Angelus Temple tomorrow is not known. Her physician said he would insist that she remain in bed for another week. Other reports had it that preparations were being made to rush the evangelist to the temple.

Before denying herself to visitors, Mrs. Kennedy, who stated she was through with Angelus Temple affairs, revealed that she had prepared a statement which would be released only after her death. She said it contained the history of her disagreements with her daughter, and what she thinks about the famous "kidnaping" case.

The truth about that, according to Mrs. Kennedy, will never be known until Judgment Day.

"I don't know where Aimee was from the time she left me to go to the beach on that day in 1926," she said, "until she reappeared in Arizona. I believed she had been drowned."

Mrs. McPherson, it will be recalled, suddenly dropped from sight while at the beach. Some weeks later she reappeared in Arizona saying she had been kidnapped and a prisoner in Mexico.

Discussion on Questions S.S. Lesson

1. What is friendship? On what principles should friendship be based?
 2. What is the greatest help to us in making friends?
 3. How should we proceed to choose our friends?
 4. What is the real purpose of friendship?
 5. What were the sacrifices that Jonathan was willing to make for the friendship of David?
 6. What is the test of friendship? Why is it that one has so few real friends?
 7. What should the church do toward the formation and perpetuation of friendships?
- Clericus says, "Friendship that is not built on the basis of common faith has not reached the deepest foundation and cannot last. There can be no close and precious friendship so long as a chasm separates us at this point. But a common faith interweaves all the threads of our lives into one web without seam or break." Lesson Prayer, "Help us not to be satisfied with less than knowing the best Friend, and knowing Him, lead us to be a real friend to others."

How Lead the Children of the Beginners' Department of the Church School to Appreciate a Church Service of Worship?
This question can be answered by giving the experience of Miss Elizabeth Shields and her class of beginners in a vacation church school. She prepared a lesson in terms of the child's experience, the title being "Why I go to Church." The aim was to give the children a brief review of happy worship in the church auditorium where they met the pastor as a leader in this worship. The activity was so planned as to develop a situation through which the child would receive something that could be given by beautiful music, beautiful windows and the presence of the pastor in the pulpit. The leader told the story of Samuel and with this as a setting invited the children to go immediately to the Heavenly Father. As the children were quietly seated they sang "Father We Will Be Quiet." They were led by the pastor in scripture reading and prayer. Following this brief service, the children were allowed to go into the pastor's study

ALL MEN NEED GOD

Stanley Jones in addressing a large business men's association was thus addressed by the chairman: "Don't talk to the crowd of business men about religion; they are hard boiled and will not take it."

In commenting on the situation, Dr. Jones said, "I don't know how to talk about anything else, I took for granted that they were folks just like myself and wanted something, and so I poured out my soul on them." At the close the chairman said, "I take it all back. I am glad you talked to us in that way. We are men as well as business men."

The conclusion drawn is that man has a fundamental need-God. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

On the day of his combat with Goliath, David killed an enemy and won a friend. His brave and chivalrous deed captivated Jonathan, the son of Saul and this was the beginning of a friendship that is one of the most celebrated and beautiful in all history.

V. 1. "And it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking to Saul that the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul." They were rarely fitted for each other. David and Jonathan, so that they grew together as one soul. Both were gifted and brave, unselfish and sympathetic; they had common ideas and ideals as the basis and bond of their common life and love yet the soldier and poet were sufficient diverse to complement each other.

V. 2. "And Saul took him that day, and would let him go no more to his father's house." Saul's better judgment recognized in David the elements of greatness and he needed such an one at his side. Greatness may come by association with great souls.

V. 3. "Then Jonathan and David made a covenant, because he loved him as his own soul." True love is safeguarded by appropriate expressions without which such love may wane. Love grows by cultivation.

V. 4. "And Jonathan stripped himself of the robe that was upon him and gave it to David, and his apparel even to his girdle, and to his bow and to his girdle." Jonathan, the crown prince, surrendered his legal right to the throne, so great was his love for David. The test of love is in the sacrifice of our best.

V. 14. "And he shall not only while yet I live show me the loving kindness of Jehovah, that I die not; but also thou shalt not cut off thy kindness from my house forever." Jonathan in acknowledging David the coming king, wanted that the life of his family be protected, as it was the custom when a king of another family took the throne to kill the last heir of the former king. True love asks protection for the children of the home.

V. 17. "And Jonathan caused David to swear again, for the love that he had in him; for he loved him as he loved his own soul." Constantly the Bible emphasizes the value of repetition, a lesson which teaches need to remember.

V. 32. "An Jonathan answered Saul, his father, and said unto him, wherefore should he be put to death? What hath he done?" Saul could brook no superior and the popular applause of David was too much for Saul, who ordered his death. Jonathan, his son, went to the root of the reason with his question. Saul's answer was expressed in attempting the death of Jonathan in a mad thrust of his spear in that moment when he lost self control.

V. 34. "So Jonathan arose from the table in fierce anger and did not eat food the second day of the month; for he was grieved for David because the father had done him shame." Jonathan's anger

Slack Coal Combustion
The reason slack coal cannot be used in the ordinary furnace is that the draft in domestic furnaces or stoves is usually insufficient to overcome the resistance to the flow of air through the fire bed.

was based on keen injustice; here was another test of friendship.

V. 41. "And as soon as the lad was gone, David arose out of a place toward the south, and fell on his face to the ground and bowed himself three times; and they kissed one another, until David exceeded." By a former arrangement, Jonathan was to give David information as to the wisdom of his remaining near the palace; the sign given by the shooting of the arrows was that he should flee for his life, but they both risked another parting, a farewell parting, a picture of two true friends.

Vs. 25-27. "I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan; very pleasant hast thou been to me. Thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women." This poem, written when the tragic death of Jonathan was made known, shows how real art grows from true love. True friendship is embodied in all real art.

First Pressed Glass
In 1827 Enoch Robinson of the Cambridge Glass Industries invented the first crude pressing machine, which was almost immediately improved by Jarvis. By 1898 the invention was perfected and pressed glass became popular, although it did not become a household commodity until about 1845.

Smart Child
After hearing the story of Cinderella for the first time, little Dorcas remarked: "I should think a glass slipper would be uncomfortable. And besides it would show any holes in your stockings." Louisville Courier-Journal.

GREAT FIELD ASSEMBLES AT PITT STADIUM FOR EVENTS

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 23.—The hot-foot boys, George Simpson, Eddie Tolian, Claude Bracey, Cy Leland, et al., in of St. Vitus and despair of the watch, will go for another constitutional over the cinders this afternoon at the Pitt Stadium and, in a series of skirmishes, will attempt to abate and discontinue all outstanding records at 100 and 220 yards. These boys, it seems, were given the hot-foot, i. e., a lighted match inserted between the sole and the upper of a shoe, early in life and since then they haven't been on the ground long enough to go back home for the Christmas holidays.

With Wyckoff, who is not here, and Percy Williams, the Canadian, they are the greatest sprinters in the world and so, this afternoon they plan to make the national senior track and field games their tinder and kindling and the record books a funeral pyre, the smoke of which will be seen around the world Dec. Dyer, the Stanford man, and Jack Elder, who once beat Williams, also are down in the books as outliers in the championship century and furlong.

A new A. A. U. record in the hundred would seem to be almost ordained at least three men in the race, Simpson, Bracey and Tolian, have beaten the games record of 9 3-4 and, "since the" track is faster than a dance floor and the weather promised a breathless quiet, not even Tolian's listed world record of 9 5-10 was deemed to be immune. Simpson did 9 2-5 once or twice and Wyckoff touched the same mark on at least one other occasion but neither effort received official tolerance, Simpson's bid being refused because he used starting blocks and Wyckoff's probably for no good reason at all.

Practically the same field would come back in the 220 but there isn't a chance of a record there, unless the prodder in the junior championships is altered. This called for the race, to be held around a turn in order that the spectators might see the entire event. All four of them did. Anyhow, neither this race nor the quarter mile, the 220-yard low hurdles and quarter mile hurdles, conducted under the same conditions, embrace record possibilities.

In fact, one had to look mostly to the 120-yard hurdles and shot put for probabilities in this respect, although it is conceded that Tommy Warne has no worse than an even chance at the pole vault figures and that home body may beat the games mark in the high jump. Ed. Hamm, the 25 foot, 11 inch broad jumper from down Georgia way, also has a chance any time he starts but it is feared that Edward may not find the pits and runaways to his fancy. The games record-holder, Sturdy, will be Warne's only contention in the vault but Tommy has only to clear 13 feet 10 inches to beat the record, and, I suspect, the man who holds it.

The high hurdle field will muster Steve Anderson, the champion; Les Sentman, Illinois; Dick Rockaway, Ohio State, and Johnny Morris, Southwestern State Teachers, among others, and it ought to be capable of anything, except an undue familiarity with Thompson's world record of 14 2-5. Morris did 14 7-10 for a junior record yesterday and may be chasing Anderson and his 14 3-5 games record when the winner parts the embroidery at the finish.

CUBS SOCK N. Y. CREW

Pete Donohue Chased to Showers In First Session, Score
Is 12 T 4.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—A swish through the air—whack of horsehide against wood—eight spiked shoes ripping dirt—Gaby Harnett has homered in the eighth with three on, the Cubs rout the Giants 12 to 4 and today flaunt a three game lead in the National League.

Gaby is a big hero and it all sounds very dramatic and inspiring, but as a matter of fact weakly weak pitching lost for the Giants in the first inning. Five singles, two walks, one error meaning five runs, and there goes your ball game, Mr. McGraw. The first four Cubs up sounded and safely whacked Pete Donohue and Hub Pruett didn't do much better, as Pete took his bath. Ross pitched far ball for Chicago and allowed 10 hits. The Cubs got 12.

The Robins, like a bevy of stuffed shirts, went to the laundry again falling before the Reds for the fourth time in a row by a score of 4 to 1. Larry Benton allowed the Sox only seven safeties.

Joe Sorrell did some rather fancy singing and the Tigers drove Joe Earnshaw to the waters downing the champion As 7 to 1.

Lois Gehrig hit homers Nos. 3 and 4 but the Yank hurlers lapped him and the Indians nosed out 5 to 4.

Hadley flew the coop in a ninth and the Browns scored three runs to tie the score at 4 in the tenth of Liska 4 to 3.

A. A. D. by Marquis with 4 bases batted 10 for the Cardinals over Philadelphia 10 to 6.

Larry French did a good job, sparing the Braves time hits, triumphed for Pittsburgh 10 to 2. Traynor was the hitting hero.

Ted Lyons chased his first tenth win, giving the Red Sox eight hits as the White Sox beat Boston 6 to 4. MacFayden, Sox hurler, was wild.

SENATE FIGHT DRAWS FOCUS

Bulkeley-McCulloch Continue to Hold Interest of Political Writers.

COLUMBUS.—The Bulkeley-McCulloch U. S. senatorial fight continued to interest editors and political writers commenting this week on the results of the Ohio primary. Its importance to the national administration as an informal referendum on the Hoover record is emphasized as plans for an intensive G. O. P. campaign in Ohio go forward in Washington.

Hal W. Conery, of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, who appraised the Democratic primary contest accurately and forecast Bulkeley's nomination, wrote, "If any proof were needed to support the assertion that Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch is in for a real battle at the November election it was provided by the primary election. According to the unofficial figures, McCulloch polled, in round numbers, 333,000 votes. That sounds, at first impression, like a lot of votes. It doesn't appear so impressive, however, when one considers that 100,000 Republicans or thereabouts, who went to the polls primary day, omitted voting for McCulloch.—The Democrats are preparing to center a large part of their fire on McCulloch in the coming campaign, stressing particularly his stand on the tariff and the Judge Parker issue, and the debonair gentleman from Canton had better be in his best fighting trim when the fight commences. Former Congressman Robert J. Bulkeley, Cleveland, the Democratic nominee who will oppose McCulloch in the November election, undoubtedly is the strongest contender the Democrats could have picked."

Reflecting the Washington viewpoint, Leo R. Sack, experienced watcher for the Akron Times-Press, in the nation's capital, wrote, "For the first time since 1916 Democratic leaders are entering a national campaign with confidence of victory.—Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland, chairman of the Democratic senatorial committee, reasons, 'The crash in the stock market, the enactment of the new tariff law carrying as it does many harsh, untimely measures, has grown confidence in the new administration, and the new administration is in power, slack business conditions which reach throughout the country, together with a long career of corruption including graft, Daugherty, Forbes and others, seems to have impressed the American people with the idea that it is a good time for a change. The recent nomination of Robert J. Bulkeley has inclined Democratic leaders to the opinion that Ohio will be one of the states to record a Democratic victory. Ohio will be the battleground of major proportions.—An Ohio victory will be especially sought because it was in Ohio that President Hoover won his first and only presidential primary contest—the Ohio Campaign in behalf of Senator Roscoe McCulloch will be waged along lines of standing by the president."

Discussing the reputation at the polls of candidates backed by Maurice Maschke, Republican national committee man and Cuyahoga-co G. O. P. potentate, the independent Cleveland Plain Dealer remarks editorially, "There is the unpleasant fact that against the popular Robert J. Bulkeley—the Cuyahoga Republicans must work for Roscoe McCulloch for whom they and their leader have never had the slightest enthusiasm.—There is no doubt at all about that quickening of the pulse of Democracy that Nexton D. Baker felt last spring. With Bulkeley, with George White for governor with the national tide of Democratic hopes rising, with Maschke rebuked as never before in this county, the Cuyahoga Democrats face opportunity, the opportunity to heed the ringing command of Baker and march into the election with the confidence that we deserve success and win it."

In an editorial in the Dayton News James M. Cox, three-time governor of Ohio and one-time presidential candidate, writes, "Mr. Bulkeley is a gentleman of culture and successful business experience."

DON'T BE A SLAVE TO LAXATIVES

Mrs. E. Gebhard, 301 W. 5th St., Newport, K. says, "My husband and I were actually slaves to laxatives, continuing to do just what we were told to do. Just couldn't stop. It got to be a habit. We even gave our children laxatives in candy form. Little did we realize that we were only aggravating and not reaching the cause of the constipation. Headaches, nervousness, indigestion and constipation still continued.

Our druggist recommended Carter's Little Liver Pills. He said these little vegetable pills would tone up the liver, stir up the bile, which acting as an antiseptic, keeps the food from rotting, and poisoning the blood. They are not habit forming and thoroughly cleanse the upper and lower bowel. Laxatives fail to do this."

Carter's Little Liver Pills are sold at all Drugstores in 25c red paper packages.

THE DIRECTOR'S GREETINGS

The Ohio State Fair marks an annual milestone in the years' state progress. It presents the best there is in livestock, farm crops, nursery production, horticulture, and all that is directly or indirectly a product of the soil. The Fair seeks to present the best there is in industry, science and art.

It seeks to present those who attend, the best recreational attractions that are to be had.

The Junior Fair and 4-H Club exhibitions, conducted and managed by the youth of Ohio, are outstanding features, recognizing the future agricultural leader of Ohio.

With all of these, and many other things that are presented at the Ohio State Fair, this marking of a milestone of progress is worthy of the consideration of all of the people of Ohio. Many people travel long distances outside of Ohio to expositions and attractions of note; but, unless this same consideration has been given to the Ohio State Fair, the citizens of Ohio are not entirely true to themselves and the state in which they live.

We spend millions for roads; we spend millions for education; we spend millions for our welfare problems, as we should; but in no other way and at such a small cost can Ohio show to her people the educational, recreational, and other advantages which Ohio has to offer them at this Fair. This year a determined effort is being made to present an exceptional range of features of Ohio's progress.

We invite you to attend the Ohio State Fair, and we know that if you are not able to take any other time off during the summer you will be well repaid. With a most sincere desire that you visit the Ohio State Fair, we wish again to commend it to you.

Very sincerely yours,
PERRY L. GREEN, Director.

GENE SARAZEN LEADS CHASE

Cards Brilliant 69 To Take
Nice Lead In Western Open Competition.

ORION, Mich., Aug. 23.—Gene Sarazen of New York, one of the old guard of golfdom, held the lead in the Western Open golf championship today with a score of 142 as the tournament entered its final phase.

Sarazen found the range at Indianwood yesterday and emerged with a brilliant card of 34-35-69, giving him a 36 hole total of 142 strokes.

Harry Hampton of Chicago, who led the field Thursday with a 69, dropped his advantage in yesterday's play and dropped back beside Al Watrous, Emery Koonis, Christian Brinke and Robert Shave, all of whom are tied for second place with scores of 144.

With the completion of 36 holes today the championship play will be at an end and the participant with the lowest card will be acclaimed the winner.

While Sarazen, one of the former National Open champions in the play, was shooting his way to the lead, Tommy Armour, the defending titleholder, was having another of those days with a 75 for a 153 total and Johnny Farrell was struggling, after a sand trapped seven at the first to pull home with 77 for 151.

Horton Smith, if he is to overtake Sarazen, will have to produce another strong finish for which he is famous. Smith was five strokes behind Sarazen as play began today.

Ahead of Smith was Laurie Ayton of Evanston, Ill., with 145, tying John Watson of South Bend, while a stroke behind them at 146 were Abe Espinosa and Denmore Shute.

the boy was a good fellow, and with one of his hands he took over the rail, and with the other he held over Roy's mouth. After a short struggle he lifted Roy's head, and earned his life by the pained and staggered as far as he could try to get away.

The other sailors started to laugh heartily. Dan took a step toward the two, but said nothing.
The others went out of the cabin when Brander, still holding his hand over Roy's mouth, said quietly:

"Don't lose your head, you sister. You'll only do harm. Talk quietly. What do you want to say?"

RED FORCES BOMB CITY

Chinese Gunboats and Troops Ordered Up River To Protect Cities.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 23.—Chinese gunboats and troops of the Nanking government ordered up the Yangtze River today to protect the cities of Wusueh and Kiukiang, reported menaced by Communists.

The vicinity was recently evacuated by foreigners when large bands of Reds were pillaging and invading Yangtze Valley communities.

Northern rebel leaders meanwhile were attempting to reorganize forces severely disrupted by Nationalist victories last week.

Advices from Honkong reported a terrific attack by loyal Yunnanese troops assisted by Cantonese airplanes against besieged Nanking, capital of the Kwangsi rebels.

In their attempt to wrest the city from the Kwangsi forces, the attacking army heavily bombed the city, dispatches stated, practically destroying the Catholic cathedral in the heart of Nanking. The British hospital immediately outside the city walls also was reported badly hit.

CHAPTER XXVIII

Once, when Commander Byrd was slightly puzzled about the problem of comfortable sleeping, the radio brought him the advice of experts. By radio, no less authorities that Fitzhugh Green and Captain Bob Bartlett sent suggestions as to how the party in Antarctica could avoid frozen clothes and other inconveniences attendant upon sleeping.

"Lay the snow shoes or skis next to the ice or snow," they sent word from the easy chairs which they occupied before an open fire in the Explorers Club in New York City. "Then spread a short-haired seal skin or a piece of canvas; then a piece of caribou skin; then lie down with the arms inside the parka and draw an extra skin over you, if you have an extra skin."

One can almost hear Captain Bob Bartlett chuckling at that last clause. One can almost see him unbuckling his dinner coat under the influence of steam heat and the glowing fireplace in the Explorers Club and laughing heartily. "That's a good bit," one hears him say. "Repeat that last bit, to make sure they get it. 'If you have an extra skin.' And be sure to emphasize the 'if.'"

"If you haven't an extra skin," the message of advice went on, "sleep sitting up. And a most important item is a long, thorough beating of the clothes with a light stick or a whipstock upon first entering the shelter and then again using sleeping bags, progressive before lying down to sleep. If disrobing should be followed to avoid getting particles of snow inside."

Every anniversary which arrived while the expedition was in Antarctica was made cheerful by the radio. The day of the anniversary of Byrd's trans-Atlantic flight brought messages of congratulation from all the world. On Easter there was music fitting to the day sent on from New York. On the Fourth of July there were addresses and music. And, finally, it was radio which told the waiting world that the long darkness at Little America was at an end. This news was flashed out into space on August 25, 1929.

For days it had been imminent. The twilight hours which had numbered less than four in the middle of the long southern night had been lengthening, a little at a time. One week they were five. The next six. Then they were ten, and down along the horizon could be seen for a space each day a promising golden tint. Finally there came a day when the sun itself was actually visible for a minute or so. This was not a true sunrise.

It was no more than a refracted portent. But only a little after it appeared, the real orb itself rose majestic and bright one morning above the horizon. The little universe in Antarctica was transformed.

It must have been, for the stalwart crew and the slim, quiet, deliberately gaited commander, a day, a week, of tremendous excitement, that day and week which followed the return of the sun to the vast whiteness which made up the Ross Ice Field. There was, to begin with, the exhilarating change from the monotonous amber glow of electricity inside the houses and the depressing gray blackness of out-of-doors to the pneumatic beauty which the new sunlight made of the ice and snow. But there was much more than that. There was, for example, the little thaw which each day of sunlight brought, and the daily revelations of this, the rediscovery of a new roof to break the snow stretches of Little America. There was release, too, in a physical sense. Now a man could get out to stretch his legs, for the storms, or at least the most terrible storms, were past, and one dared walk out in the open. There was work, and that, after the long days of forced inactivity, was a rich, welcome privilege.

Little America became a whirlpool of activity. The biologists began again to send their dredges down to the bottom of the Bay of Whales, three four, five hundred fathoms, bringing up great hauls of the passively floating or weakly swimming animal life, the plankton, with which the Bay abounded—minute organisms, plants chiefly diatoms and blue-green algae, and animals largely protozoans and entomostracans, with occasionally eggs and larvae and a few jellyfish.

The geologists searched assiduously, and such small discoveries as a piece of moss, or a few pebbles, or a shell made a whole day worth while.

The dogs were mad with delight at being free from their winter quarters. They yelped and tugged in ecstasy as they were harnessed again to the sleds.

The photographers brought out their equipment and when nothing better offered took pictures of the penguins imprisoned while awaiting transportation to America; or of the killer-whales which began to push their long, rakish snouts through the rotting ice of the bay or of a seal spinning in a frenzy with his mouth full of a half-swallowed fish that would neither go in nor out; or of the airplane hangers and their attendant machine shop slowly emerging from under their coverings of snow.

Around these last—the activity, was most strenuous. The planes had to be inspected, the equipment had to be gone over; the fuel stores, had to be checked. And once more there loomed the Brody digman task of clearing a runway from which the planes could take off in safety. A more important task this than it had been, even in January. For now, as all were aware, the climax of the whole expedition was imminent.

Back in New York, when his expedition was in the making, Commander Byrd had said that the Polar flight was to be secondary to the scientific work of his party. He meant it then. In a sense it held true throughout the entire period of exploration. But in another sense circumstances would not allow it to remain true. There was a quality of splendid drama about the projected journey by air from Little America to the Pole, which caused it to take on a vast importance in the minds of the world which was watching the little group down in Antarctica. It was becoming, that flight, a symbol of victory. No matter what else might be achieved, there would always be a sense of defeat if the Floyd Bennett, with its three giant motors, failed to carry Byrd in triumph to the southernmost spot on the globe and back.

No matter what Commander Byrd had said in New York, no matter what his common sense told him down in Little America, it is pretty certain that emotionally he reacted much as the rest of the world was reacting. He, too, could not fail to appreciate the drama inherent in the flight which each day now brought nearer. One feels sure that he felt a keen in the biologists, and the geologists; one feels sure that he never forgot the vast scientific importance of the work his meteorologists were doing. But one feels equally sure that in his heart of hearts he felt most strongly about his forthcoming journey by air over the great white waste above which man had never flown before. One sees him most often about the great craft which was to be his vehicle; one hears his voice most often in careful discussion with his aides and his mechanics.

There were still many days before the flight would be made. It was late August when the sun came back and not until late November would the Floyd Bennett take the air on its epochal 1,600 mile journey. But the days were no more than enough for all that had to be done. Those supply caches were still to be placed; one, the most distant by Byrd himself in the Queen Maud Mountains. And the placing of these caches was of the utmost importance. Properly situated, Byrd and his aides would have a chance should their plane fail them and force them down in the Antarctic wilderness. Improperly situated the plane crew might easily perish before help could reach them from the base at Little America.

Besides the supply caches there were a multitude of details to be arranged. Every instrument had to be checked. The provisions to be carried in the Polar flight had to be carefully estimated, so much for immediate use, so much more to have in the event of disaster. The Floyd Bennett's gasoline consumption per mile was known, but perhaps, the winter in the Antarctic had altered this. A slight change might be of the greatest moment. A test was imperative! No less imperative were tests of every other working part of the plane. There was, too, the matter of clothing, and the matter of route, and of maps. And these had been carefully considered, but on such a hazardous undertaking it would have been foolhardy not to consider them again, on the chance that some small flaw had been overlooked.

Between August 25 and November 28 there were many days, but no day was anything but full for Byrd and for the men who would make the great flight with him, for Balchen, McKinley and June. Copyright 1930, by A. L. Burt Company. Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The amazing film record of Admiral Byrd's expedition to the South Pole will play a return engagement at the Cliftona theatre at the conclusion of this story.

The complete guide-book

IF YOU'VE been a tourist in foreign lands, you've probably come to have a high regard for one or another of the standard guide-books. Surrounded by strange scenes, strange names, and with your time limited, you have turned with relief to any volume which tells you on good authority where to go and what to do.

Consider your ordinary shopping tours in the same light. Without an up-to-date guide-book of merchandise appearing daily within the pages of this newspaper, your most casual trip to the stores would be more or less like a ramble in foreign countries.

We're speaking of the advertisements, of course. If it weren't for the advertisements you would be a stranger in the market, surrounded by strange names, strange brands. Buying would be guessing, unless you tested every article you wanted before you bought it.

As it is, you can make up your shopping list in a few minutes, and buy with confidence instead of suspicion—knowing what you're getting—knowing that consistently advertised goods must maintain standard quality.

Take full advantage of the great guide-book of this modern age—read the advertisements every day.
